What if one of your crystals breaks? Here are a few ideas on how you can still co-create with your crystal:

- Sprinkle the pieces around the outside of your house with the intention of protection.
- Display them in a sacred corner of your house (make sure they can’t be reached by kids or pets) or on windowsills
- Place them outside of the Feng Shui wealth corner of your house to amplify its energy (top left corner of the house when your back is against the front door).
- Place them in your plant pots or outside where your plants grow.
- Create a fairy house outside or in a pot and place them there.
- Place them in a little fabric pouch for safety and add them to your bath.
- I have also seen people pulverize their broken crystals and paint with them just like you would paint with water colors. Some crystal stores actually sell these powders.

Whatever you do, please treat them with the same love and respect that you would a whole crystal. Just because their outside appearance changes, it doesn’t mean that their essence and healing capacity does.

To learn more about how and why crystals work and to start and deepen your crystal healing practice, check out my online course Crystal Healing Simplified.

With love and light,

Damla